Why the Sun and the Moon Live in the Sky
Long ago, the sun and the moon lived on the earth.
Sun was strong and handsome. Moon was quiet and beautiful. Sun and Moon fell in love. Sun asked Moon to marry him.
Sun and Moon invited their friend Water to the wedding.
Water had many relatives - the ocean, the sea, the lakes, rivers and streams. Water wanted to bring them all to the wedding but Sun and Moon’s house was too small to fit them all in.
Sun built a bigger house to fit in all Water’s relatives, but it was still too small.
So Sun built an even bigger house, with even more rooms, to fit in all Water’s relatives. But it was still too small.
Sun did not want to delay the wedding any longer. He told Water to call all her relatives to the wedding.
'All my little streams, come to the wedding,' called Water. The streams covered the floor of the house. In came small fish and frogs.
‘All my lakes and rivers, come to the wedding,’ called Water. The lakes and rivers filled the rooms with water to the roof. In came big fish, water birds and crocodiles.
Sun and Moon climbed onto the roof of the house. ‘Water, your relatives have filled all the rooms but there is still space in the yard,’ said Sun.
So Water called her mother, the sea, and her father, the ocean, to come to the wedding. Big waves rolled over the house.
In came fish, dolphins and whales.
The waves hit the roof where Sun and Moon sat.
Sun and Moon jumped up high into the sky.
And that is where they still live today.
